Easter Event Saturday, April 19th:

This annual Easter Event for Creekside residents is very popular! Come join your Rec Center Staff and the Easter Bunny for a candy and candy-filled egg hunt for youngsters' ages 1 to 12 years. (bring your own Easter basket). After "the hunt", the whole family is invited into the center for donuts and beverages. Please plan to attend this free, fun event! The egg hunt starts promptly at 10:00 am.

The Recreation Center Will Be Closed on Sunday, April 20th for the Easter Holiday.

We will reopen on Monday, April 21st at 7:00 am. Happy Easter!

Please see the new location for the shredding event!

Shredding Event Scheduled:

Having a cross-cut shredder at home is convenient, but when you have a big pile resulting from a lengthy paperwork purge, taking your bags and boxes of paperwork and mail to a community event makes a lot more sense, and also saves you time. Don't miss out.... the Stroh Ranch Community Association is sponsoring a community-wide Shred Day! No CDs or drives please.

The Stroh Ranch shredding event will be Saturday, May 31st, 2025 from 9:00 a.m.-11:00 a.m., (rain or shine). New location noted below. Event details:

What: Stroh Ranch Shredding Event | When: Saturday, May 31st from 9:00 a.m.-11:00 a.m.

Where: PLEASE NOTE THE LOCATION OF THE SHRED EVENT HAS CHANGED, PLEASE SEE THE MAP WITH THE NEW LOCATION BELOW | Cost: Free. | Limit: 10 banker boxes

If you are looking for an affordable and fun summer activity for your children, look no further! The SRA Swim Team is a Recreational Summer Swim Team that swims out of the Anthology and Stroh Ranch HOA Neighborhoods.

Non-residents are allowed to join the team, but residents get priority.

We teach youth swimmers (ages 6 - 18) how to swim technical strokes (Freestyle, Backstroke, Breaststroke and Butterfly) and compete in swim meets.

Swimmers need to be able to swim at least one of these strokes 25 yards (one length of a pool) to join the swim team.

The swim team season runs from Tuesday, May 27th to Saturday, July 19th

We practice four days a week and swim meets on Saturday mornings.

Smitty's has advertised with Porchlink over the course of several years and we find the experience seamless. As a seasonal business we often find ourselves with an exceedingly large workload in our day to day processes and we greatly appreciate that we can count on Kerri at Porchlink to touch base with us to ensure we have our ad out. We have worked with other companies responsible for HOA newsletters and found when it came to us the advertisers, our needs were never a priority. The professional working relationship we've exercised over the years with Porchlink has surpassed our needs. We would recommend them to any business looking to get their name out to the community.

Sarah Smith
Marketing Manager for Smitty's Sprinklers

We have been advertising in the Porchlink newsletters for almost 2 years now. The staff is always professional and pleasant to work with. The newsletter has been very helpful in getting business for our small plumbing company. The ad usually pays for itself each month because so many people use it to get reasonable, trustworthy services.

Native, drought tolerant, invasive, and more: Making sense of ambiguous plant terms

Like colors or garden styles, plant terminology tends to flow with the times. While some terms originated with particular scientific meanings, others are marketing terms, and many of the same terms are used across a range of fields with slightly (or very) different meanings. Confusion is a likely outcome. If you find yourself flummoxed by plant terms, here's a helpful primer.

What are native plants? Saying that a plant is native to an area typically means that it grows there without any direct modern or historic human intervention. In North America, this usually means without European intervention specifically.

"Native plants" are usually thought of as belonging to a region, whether it be natural (like an EPA eco-region) or geopolitical (like a state or county). Plants that have grown in one place for a long time are likely to be well integrated into the local ecology, though it's important to define time scales as well.

For example, many species of trees that would now be considered "exotic" in Colorado are well represented in the fossil record here. Are these species "native plants?" It depends on your perspective.

What are adapted plants? An "adapted plant" is one that grows well in the local soil and climatic conditions with minimal (if any) assistance from a gardener.

Adapted plants can be from anywhere and include both "native" and "non-native" species. Adaptation typically refers to whether or not a plant will thrive in a specific site. For example, aspens may be regarded as native on the Front Range, but they are not adapted to most residential landscapes. Blue grama grass, on the other hand, is both native and (usually) adapted.

What are drought-tolerant plants and what does drought-tolerant mean? Drought-tolerant is a quality that refers to a plant's ability to survive and grow with limited natural water availability. Drought-tolerant plants are varieties that grow well in the absence of rain (i.e., a drought). However, this definition ought to include supplemental water from gardeners, too because anything can tolerate an absence of rain if you water it!

Because rainfall patterns vary across the world, so do the plants that could be considered drought-tolerant.

A plant that could grow well in the eastern United States with only natural precipitation could struggle in the dry, western states without regular doses of irrigation. Some plants tolerate drought by going dormant (read: "becoming ugly"). Don't take "drought-tolerant" at face value, instead ask specific questions about how much water a plant really needs to stay healthy.

What are xeriscape plants or xeric plants?

"Xeric" comes from the Greek word for dry. When used to describe plants, it usually means they originated in relatively dry parts of the world. Xeric plants could be native or non-native, and may or may not require at least some supplemental irrigation. The goal of using xeric plants is to use less water. However, defining what "less" means is important here if saving water is one of your landscape goals.!

What are water-wise plants? Many people equate water-wise with "xeric" but the term has yet to officially make it into the dictionary, making it the slipperiest of all.

The term is perhaps most appropriately applied to whole gardens rather than individual plants. A water-wise garden is one that uses no more water than absolutely necessary for plant health. Regardless of how much that actually is, it's not "too much." Note again the need to define a scale and the subjective nature of the term. (Seeing a pattern yet?)

What are invasive weeds? A weed is any plant that grows where you don't want it, especially if it spreads and becomes hard to control.

The term "invasive weeds" usually refers to weeds that are from far outside your local area and that spread rapidly. Note that both of these terms (invasive and weed) are subjective in this context, and require someone's judgement. There are not strict rules about these labels, and different people use them in different ways.

However, as it relates to weeds, the term "noxious" is regulated by both state and federal agencies. In 1996 the Colorado Noxious Weed Act (Title 35, Article 5.5) defined a "noxious weed" as:

An alien plant or parts of an alien plant that have been designated by rule as being noxious or has been declared a noxious weed by a local advisory board, and meets one or more of the following criteria:

- (a) Aggressively invades or is detrimental to economic crops or native plant communities;
- (b) Is poisonous to livestock;
- (c) Is a carrier of detrimental insects, diseases, or parasites;
- (d) The direct or indirect effect of the presence of this plant is detrimental to the environmentally sound management of natural or agricultural ecosystems.

It's illegal to sell noxious weeds, but they may end up in natural areas and gardens by accident and through natural spread. More information about Colorado Noxious Weeds can be found here.

Key takeaways: As you can see, whether a plant is labeled native, adapted, xeric, drought-tolerant, invasive, or even a weed often depends on context, perspective, and interpretation. These terms evolve over time and vary depending on who's using them—scientists, gardeners, marketers, or policymakers. Rather than getting caught up in rigid definitions, it's helpful to think critically about what each term means in your specific gardening situation. What matters most is understanding how a plant will behave in your landscape, how much care it will require, and whether it aligns with your gardening goals. With that knowledge, you can make informed decisions that benefit both your garden and the surrounding environment.
